

City Council District Redistricting

April 16, 2011

The Dallas City Council has created a Redistricting Commission to revise the city's council district boundaries based upon 2010 census data. They are tasked with ensuring equal representation based upon district population and to avoid voting discrimination against minorities. This is an important task that will define politics in the city for the next decade, as and as such the DHL will be taking an interest in the process and the results. DHL also strongly encourages residents to attend the upcoming redistricting public hearings and make their opinions heard. A list of these hearings can be found on the city website.

