

Celebrating 2013: Dallas Goes Green

November 11, 2013

Thanks to much hard work by Dallas residents and allied organizations, 2013 has been a year that has seen notable successes in regards to protecting the environment and our quality of life. In particular, Dallas is: The second city in Texas to adopt a long-term “Zero Waste” plan to reduce the amount of waste sent to landfills by 85% over the next 30 years.

The largest city in Texas to consider a local ordinance to phase out single-use bags. On the verge of adopting one of the strongest, most protective gas drilling ordinances of any city in Texas. These achievements deserve to be celebrated, and they will be at two events in November and December!

Mark your calendar and plan to attend both. The events are both a celebration and a fundraiser for the Texas Campaign for the Environment, which has been leading the way in advocating for environmental issues in the city.
