

City Charter Review Underway

February 13, 2014

Several important issues are on the table for study during the 2014 Dallas City Charter review process. The sixteen community leaders selected by the Council last month were tasked by the mayor to review the council redistricting process, council pay, council terms, and board and commission member qualification rules, amongst other matters. These are subjects that will affect the entire city, and as is appropriate, the city has scheduled multiple public hearings in addition to the commission's regular Tuesday night meetings at City Hall.

The current meeting schedule can be found on the city website here.

The commission is tasked with completing the review and reporting to the City Council by June 4th, 2014.
